

Gabrielle Sparkling Rose Wine

Well, that bottle went quickly.

The sweltering season is upon us—with the thermometer oozing over 90 degrees, and nary a breeze to be found.

In such weather, sure, an icy, light-bodied beer can refresh. But our palates cried out for chilled bubbly. It is cool, wet, and inevitably crisp and more akin to water than beer.

Gabrielle Rose of New York really fit the bill. Its flavor stood up to the olives we chomped, and

The price is right—just $15 a bottle.

This is a wine to keep in stock for the balmy days or whenever you crave a bit of levity.

We polished off this bottle with dinner, and were the happier for it. (Rating: Very Good)
